Toeniskoetter Construction Expands and Renovates State-of-the-Art Medical Lab

Toeniskoetter Construction, Inc. finished a complex expansion and renovation for Hunter Laboratories at 2605 S. Winchester Blvd. in Campbell. Hunter Labs is the fastest-growing clinical reference laboratory in Northern California, and it needed more space to accommodate its rapid growth at its Campbell headquarters. With the expansion, the locally owned Hunter Labs became the sole occupant of the entire 24,000-square-foot building, providing an additional 8,000 square feet of space for office and laboratory use.

Gary Dam, Executive Vice President for Toeniskoetter Construction, served as project manager, and Adam Toeniskoetter was the superintendent. The architect was Jim Fulton, Principal and Senior Project Manager with ARC TEC, Inc.

To keep the lab operating 24/7, Toeniskoetter Construction performed dust, vibration and noise control; worked nights and weekends; and installed temporary barriers, moving them as the crew advanced through all four phases of the project.

“Toeniskoetter Construction had to work on a very fast time frame, in a fully occupied building with a fully functioning lab that never shut down,” said Dan Amend, President of Toeniskoetter Construction. “It took a great deal of planning and coordination so as not to disrupt any number of sensitive lab procedures.”

Toeniskoetter Construction expanded the lab by 5,000 square feet to better house some of the most modern lab instruments and technology available. In particular, Toeniskoetter Construction coordinated the installation of a Siemens ADVIA LabCell Automation Solution, an automated track system that uses lasers to read bar codes and transports samples to the right equipment for testing. Only a few of the state-of-the-art ADVIA LabCells as complex as the one installed at Hunter are in use in the United States.

“We created a feature wall of glass so clients could view into the laboratory,” Dam said. “It’s a very technical lab. It’s amazing to see the testing taking place.” •
